

Health:

Marie Sees the Doctor

The doctor's office was very clean, with tall white cabinets and uncomfortable plastic chairs. Marie had called the receptionist earlier that day to make an appointment.

She had been feeling sick for the last few days and didn't want it to get worse. The door to the room opened and Doctor Yu walked in, she was a tall woman wearing a white lab coat, her dark hair was in a bun.

"Hello Doctor Yu, thank you for seeing me today," Marie said. Marie was dressed in jeans and a t-shirt, her brown hair was pulled back in a ponytail.

Doctor Yu smiled at her and looked down at the papers in her hands, "it says here you've had a fever and a stomach ache. Have you had any other symptoms?"

Marie nodded, "Yes, yesterday I had a really bad headache and a bit of a cough."

"Have you felt any other pain?" Doctor Yu asked, Marie shook her head no. Doctor Yu took off the stethoscope from around her neck and listened to Marie's lungs. "You have a little bit of fluid in your lungs."

"Is that bad?" Marie asked.

"You'll be fine," Doctor Yu said, "it's very normal. I'm going to prescribe you some medicine, and you'll start feeling better very quickly."

"Thank you!" Marie took the piece of paper Doctor Yu handed to her. "I can fill it at the pharmacy, right?"

"Exactly," Doctor Yu nodded. "On a different topic, how is your husband John doing? How is his knee injury? Did the surgery go well?"

"Yes, it did!" Marie said, "He had a great follow-up with the surgeon recently, his knee doesn't hurt at all anymore. Nurse Brian gave him some wonderful advice to help with the healing."

"I'm very glad to hear it," Doctor Yu said, she opened the door to the room and stepped back out into the hall, "when you're ready you can go back up to the front and give your health card to the receptionist. She'll make sure everything is taken care of."

"Thank you Doctor Yu, I hope you have a good day," Marie said as she stood up and grabbed her purse.

