

Groceries:

Marie and Lewis go to the Store

“Lewis, could you please grab the shopping cart from the front of the store?” Marie asked her husband.

He nodded, “Yes I can, did you remember to grab the reusable bags from the car?”

“I did!” Marie said cheerily. She held up the tote bags, they were light brown with the logo of the local library on the front.

Marie and Lewis were trying out a new grocery store in their neighborhood. Usually they went to one closer to their apartment, but they had heard from a friend that Tammy’s Groceries had excellent prices and sales. It was busy today, with many people walking around and crowding the aisles. Since neither Marie nor Lewis had been to the store before, they weren’t sure where most of the things they were planning to buy were located.

Marie took a moment to look around the store, wanting to make sure that she wouldn’t get lost. Their grocery list today was small, Marie and Lewis only needed a couple of things for their dinner that night. Right away Marie noticed the fresh fruit and vegetables, walking forward she grabbed a head of broccoli. As she did, Lewis came up behind her with the cart.

"I already grabbed us the frozen chicken," he said, gesturing into the cart where he had placed it.

Marie smiled, "Thanks, honey!" She put the broccoli in next to it, "Now all we need is some canned tomato sauce and dried pasta. Could you please check the aisle with the canned food?"

"Absolutely," Lewis said, "when we have what we need, let's meet up near the cashier to check out."

The couple split off and went to fetch the ingredients they needed. When they came back, they waited in line until it was their turn to put the food on the conveyor belt. The cashier began scanning their items.

"Hello!" He said, "My name is George. How would you like your groceries to be packed today? Paper bags or plastic?"

"We brought our own reusable bags," Marie said, "we can use those instead."

"And how do you want to pay? Cash or card?"

"Cash please," Lewis said and pulled out his wallet.

The cashier finished putting their groceries away and waved at them. "Thank you for coming, I hope we see you again soon!"

"Thank you!" Marie said as she and Lewis left the store.
